

Archaeologist

Archaeologists are scientists that use artifacts (objects) to learn about people who lived in the past. Archaeologists use tools to dig in the ground and find artifacts that have been buried for thousands of years.

Artifacts

Artifacts are items, like clothes, tools, electronics, and others, that give information about what people did for fun, what they ate, how they looked, and other clues. You could tell a lot about a person based on the artifacts above. This person may like sports, be from Brazil, live in a city, and use technology.

Time Capsules

Time capsules hold artifacts that tell others how people from the past lived.

Time capsules can be sealed tubes or even a shoe box.