

Urban planners design places that people live. They makes sure that a city or town has what it needs. Examples include police stations, transportation systems, sewage systems, sidewalks, and parks.

Urban Planners at Work

Urban planners can work in an office. They might have meetings with an engineer or city official to plan what should go into a city.

They might also work on a construction site. They can provide advice about where streets and buildings should go.

They might also meet with people who in a community. They can ask people what they need to make their communities better.
