What does a dermatologist do?

Dermatologists can look at your skin to make sure it is healthy or give suggestions about what to do if you have a problem with your skin (like put a special cream on your skin)

or work with other scientists to create new medicines and creams

Where does a dermatologist work?

Dermatologists can work in a hospital

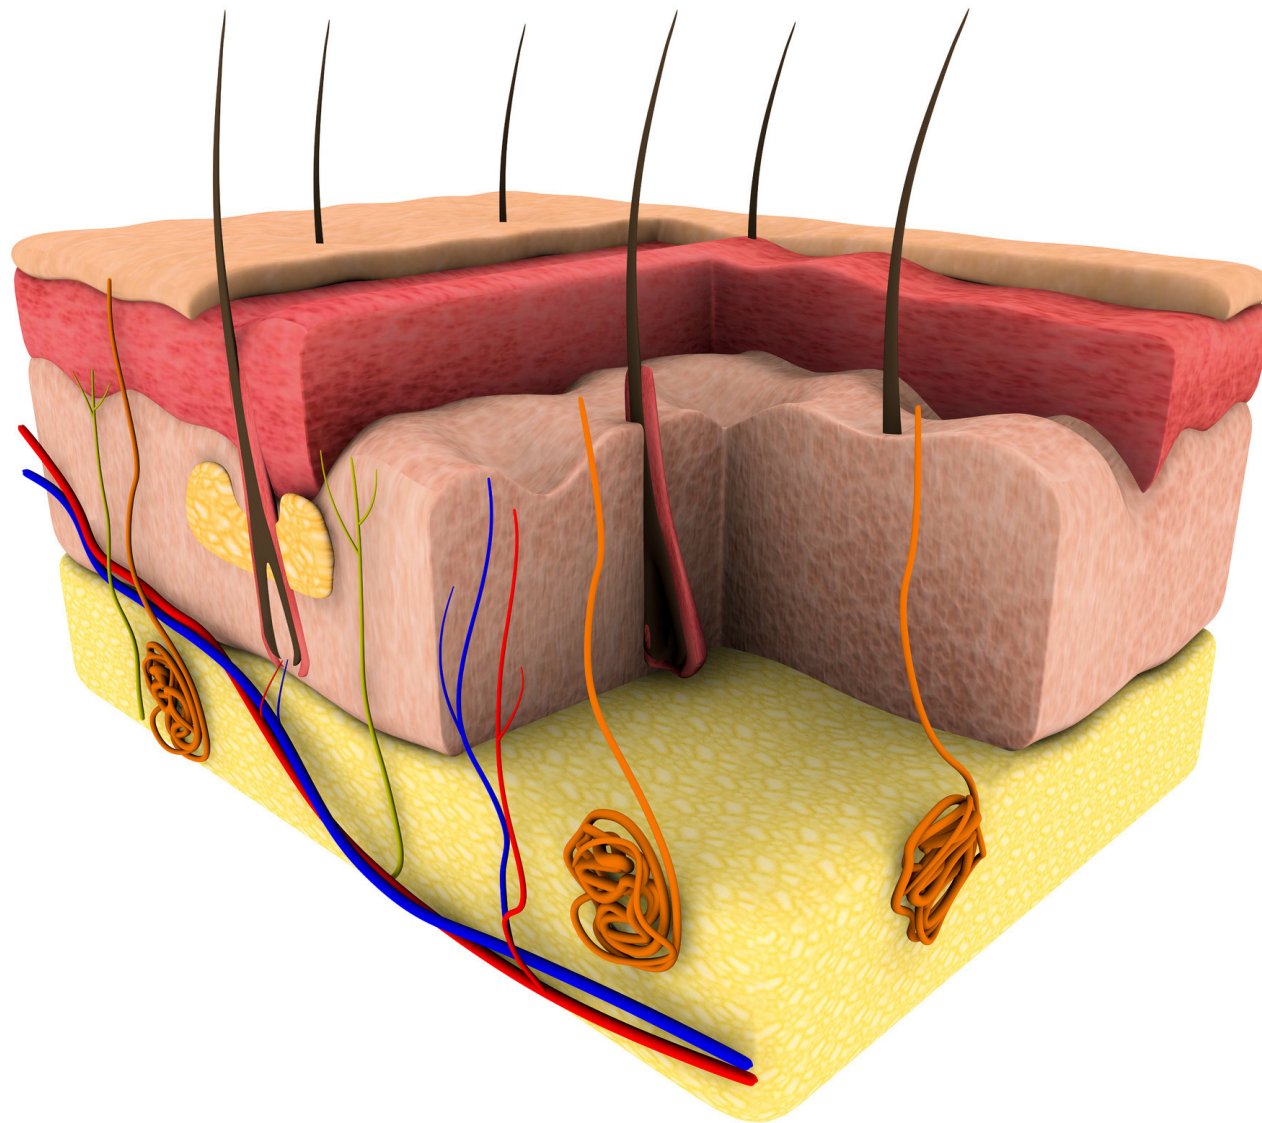

or a doctor's office

or in a lab (where they can see the skin up close under a microscope. They can also run special tests or science experiments to see how medicine affects the skin)
